WILLIAM V. MONG

In His Own Short Play

"JOHN AMERICA"

Played at the Writers' Club, May 29, 30, with Mr. Mong, William Walling and Dorothy Phillips

"Perhaps the dramatic content, the apogee of the evening, was reached in that slip of emotional beauty, poignant in the passion of its sincerity, "JOHN AMERICA," written by William V. Mong, who also played the leading part. A real patriotism, that of the foreign-born citizen who carries an ideal of America forgotten by the average American, was painted with such pathos and fidelity that, in the heart of a business man, it became a realization, rather than the vain shibboleth of some outworn tradition. To his characterization, "John America," William V. Mong brought the finely drawn sympathy of his genius. It was sensitively integrated, fraught with that inner radiance, that quality of evanescent beauty and abnegation which lies hidden in every human heart."—Katherine T. von Blon in Los Angeles Times.

ISABEL WITHERS

". . . although an exception must be made for the uncommonly good performance of Isabel Withers in what seems to us the chief role."—Heywood Broun, New York Times (The Wild Westcotts).

"Miss Withers has never been seen to such advantage as in the part of Julie. She wins tumultuous plaudits for magnificent and well controlled emotional work."—Florence Lawrence, L. A. Examiner (Night Hostess).

"For overshadowing skill, Isabel Withers deserved the palm. It is she who portrays the temptress and she achieved a deft characterization by a splendid simplicity. It will be well if she is retained in this locality."—Edwin Schallert, L. A. Times (The Barker).

"Here is a great actress surely. Her scene with the boy was so subdued by her artistry that it had the true quality of tragedy."—Film Mercury, L. A. (The Barker).

VONDELL DARR

NEWSPAPER CRITICISMS FROM "ON TRIAL"

"The performances of tiny Vondell Darr, as the sweet but precocious daughter of the man on trial, and that of Lois Wilson, wife of the accused, are outstanding. Little Miss Darr's voice rings with an appealing quality, so childishly sincere, that her silent talent, emotionalism is at its peak during her testimony, which changes the tide for her father."—Waly in Film Reviews.

"An altogether charming little child named Vondell Darr well nigh captured the first night audience with the uniform excellence of her performance and the splendid manner in which her lines were delivered. She's audience ammunition; be sure to talk about her."—Film Daily.

"In 'On Trial,' a little girl named Vondell Darr—or at least called that on the program—sat on the witness stand and without a trace of striving after the proper accent on her syllables, gave a quiet and restrainedly moving performance of a child telling of her mother's fatal infidelity."—Film Mercury.

"To our way of thinking the honors go to a nine-year-old girl, Vondell Darr. Her enunciation was absolutely flawless, distinct and sweet and clear as the notes of a lark. For months we have been on the qui vive to find the perfect talker, and Eureka—we have her in this little, darling, golden-voiced Vondell Darr! She's a Phoenix—a prodigy—almost a miracle—and how she can act! To Warner Brothers she should be worth her weight in radium."—Hollywood Filmograph.

NEWSPAPER CRITICISMS FROM "THE DUMMY"

"Vondell Darr romps away with the honors. She cannot be more than eight years old, probably less, but she reads her lines like a veteran and there is none of the parrot-like recitation that makes most kids such damnable bores."—Zits Theatrical.

"Vondell Darr, who must be all of nine years old, gives a performance which should make many people with ten times her experience bow their heads in envy. Incidentally, little Miss Darr, unlike most children, has a voice which doesn't sound like a new shoe over the Vitaphone."—Spectator—Welford Beaton.

"The hit of the film is Vondell Darr, a child with the poise of a seasoned star and a voice with the clarity of a bell, and cherubic beauty."—Daily News.

"And one must not forget the adorable little Vondell Darr, the child of the golden curls who tugs at your heart and brings the 'a-ahs!' from audiences."

"Again the child, Vondell Darr, who scored in 'On Trial,' held her audience with tones that were soft, yet clear and always childlike."—Norbert Lusk, in L. A. Examiner.

Maybe it would be better to phone . . .

Ferocious looking chap, what? Well, really he's mild, yet he satis—that is he's quit efficient and ready to serve.
Guessing will do you no good; we'll have to tell you—it's Billy Mann.
Yes it is—and he's still selling Shell 400 the "dry" gas, and Shell Motor Oil that forms no hard carbon.
Anyone who telephones him and doesn't get an answer has probably called the wrong number. So if your scrip book is getting thin you'd better write these two numbers down:

Fugitives from Fame

At Rancho Malibu la Costa . . . people famous in the world of pictures, art and letters are building the Southlands' most exclusive oceanside community.

Here you can spend your leisure moments in healthful . . . protected seclusion.

Here property values will double and redouble as values invariably do where exclusiveness is assured.

Now is the time to act while opening prices prevail.
